The study was organized by the 6th semester (Hons) students of the department of Education. M.C.College, Barpeta in an academic session of 2022-23. The study was carried out on the “Health and Hygiene of primary (lower) school children of Barpeta district of Assam of their own choice of areas.

Objectives of the study :

- To study the problems of maintaining health and hygiene in the school environment.
- To know about the physical health and hygiene condition of the children of primary school.

Outcome of the study :

From the study investigators have found that the bacterial load on the hands of primary school students was highest followed by secondary school students, KG students and lowest among PG and UG students. Age of the student also determines the degree of contamination and it decreased with the age of the students.
